M. De Neale Morgan, Pioneer Artist Opens One Man Show at Art Gallery Saturday, Public Reception Sunday

BY IRENE ALEXANDER

To M. De Neale Morgan, whose one-man exhibit in the George Beardsley Memorial room opens concurrently with a general oil show at the Art association gallery on Saturday, January 15, the term Carmel Artist belongs most indisputably.

Although San Francisco was the city of her birth, on May 24, 1868, and in the lineaments of her strong yet sensitive face, in her personality, at once sturdily individual and warmly human, are mingled the traits of pioneering Scots forbears and Colonial patriots, she is linked to Carmel by a chain of events which began a good two generations before her arrival.

In 1856 her grandparents, Daniel and Jeannie Ross landed in Monterey. They had left their native Edinburgh for Canada, where a chance reading of Richard Dana's Two Years Befort the Mast inspired them to take ship immediately around the Isthmus of Panama in order to give their youngest —and thirteenth—child the benefit of the Land of Sunshine. Their first choice had been San Francisco, but there they found the streets filled with red-shirted miners hastening, pistol in hand to avenge the murder of James King of William. Into the next schooner for Monterey Father Ross hustled his frightened brood. And Number Thirteen, who cherished a lifelong tmidity about Vigilantes, Indians and bears, was Christina Ross, later to become the mother of M. De Neale Morgan.

The rooming house of Jack Swan, now restored as the First Theatre of Monterey, was the temporary lodging of the Ross family upon their arrival. Then they settled upon a ranch at Point Pinos, not far from the present site of Carmel. Reminiscences of the romance and the dangers of life in Monterey during the latter '50s and early '60s were taken down many many years later from his mother's dictation by M. De Neale's brother, the late Thomas W. Morgan, and will doubtless some day find their way into book form, with illustrations by the artist.

When Christina was ten years old and the family was ranching on the Salinas River, a brilliant young civil engineer, the son of Thomas Nicholson Morgan who graduated as medalist from Yale in 1831, with Willinm England Kip, first Bishop of California, came to Monterey with the Terrill Surveying company. From a meeting at this time grew the friendship which culminated in the marriage of Christina Ross and Thomas Morgan at Santa Cruz eight years later.

By that time Thomas Morgan was assistant engineer in the construction department of the Central Pacific Railroad, an associate and throughout his life a close friend of Leland Stanford. In the earliest of experiments with motion pictures, made in 1877 on the racing track of the Stanford farm at Palo Alto, it was M. De Neale Morgan's father who assisted the photographer, Muybridge, in setting up the battery of 24 cameras with threads stretched across the track so that the horses' hooves would snap the shutters as they passed, thus producing a series of pictures that when set in a row on a shelf would give the illusion of horses in motion, and according to one story, settle a $25,000 bet made by Stanford that a trotting horse had all four of his feet off the ground at once.

Mary De Neale, named for her.

Col. John Keliher Receives Legion Of Merit Medal

The medal of the Legion of Merit was awarded to Colonel John Keliher (Field Artillery) of the U. S. Army General Staff Corps, in ceremonies conducted on December 12 at Schofield Barracks, Hawaii, by Lt. General Richardson, commanding general of the South Pacific Area, according to an official announcement received here this week by Mrs. Keliher and their young son, John Graham Keliher.

Colonel Keliher's citation is for "exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services. As Assistant Chief of Staff, G-3, United States Army Forces, Central Pacific Area, Colonel Keliher was charged with the planning, supervision and coordination of a most successful diversified combat training program. Through this program not only did the combat forces of the Central Pacific Area attain exceptional training, but they were able to engage in the special amphibious operations required for the successful capture of the Gilbert Islands with a high morale and confidence in their invincibility that could only mean victory for our forces. Through his initiative, high professional ability, and untiring efforts, Colonel Keliher was an important contributor to the success of these operations."

Colonel Keliher, who was stationed in Hawaii on December 7, 1941, has been in continuous service there and elsewhere ever since. Mrs. Keliher and her son left Hawaii four months after Pearl Harbor and have been making their home on Scenic Drive in Carmel since April of last year.

$25,000 Carmel's Red Cross Quota For March Drive

Carmel's quota for the Red Cross War Fund Drive which starts March 1 has been set at $25,000, Sidney Trevvett, drive chairman for the Carmel district, said yesterday.

This is an increase of more than $6,000 over last year's quota of $18,900, but should not be difficult to achieve, Mr. Trevvett believes, in view of the extraordinary need this year, and of the fact that Carmel went over its quota last year, contributing $21,000. This year's quota is only $4,000 more than was contributed last year, he pointed out.

His committee will be announced in the Pine Cone-Cymbal the latter part of this month.

Chicken Troubles Settled; Council Plans Election

An amicable understanding without involving the city council was reached between the principals in the "Chicken Incident" City Attorney Peter Ferrante announced at an adjourned meeting of the city council Wednesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock.

Finn Frolich, Carmel sculptor, to whom Artist Florence Lockwood has given the chickens whose odorous presence under his bedroom window was resented by Ira Taylor and other dwellers in the neighborhood of Carpenter and Ocean, has promised:

1. To move excess pens and chickens to Seaside.

2. To maintain only a few fowls in the lot next to Taylor's dwelling and to keep them in clean pens.

Taylor, appealing to the council last week for relief said that "the stench is terrible" and was acting as a deterrent to the sale of his property.

Other business of the meeting was deciding on polling places for the election to be held April 11 and to raise the compensation for election officials from $6.00 to $7.50.

CARMEL HIGH IN PRINT

A handsome cut of Carmel high school appears on the cover of the January issue of the American School Board Journal. Inside are six more half-tones of photos by George Seideneck both interior and exterior views of the high school units. They are used to illustrate an excellent article on the school by Superintendant J. W. Getsinger which the Pine Cone Cymbal has reprinted on the feature page of this issue. Superintendant Getsinger is contributing his check for the article to the Bardarson Scholarship Fund.

Viola Wasterlain Violinist With Britt String Trio

The Britt String and Piano Trio, which performs for the Carmel Music Society on February 6th at the Sunset Auditorium, will present as its violinist member Miss Viola Wasterlain, who was acclaimed by music critics as "one of the most gifted women violinists of all time" following her debut recital in Town Hall, New York, in the fall of 1937. Later appearances made the reviewer of the New York Sun wonder whether "aside from Erica Morini, a player of a very different type, Miss Wasterlain has a peer among women fidlers of the day." Her appearances, in recital and as soloist with symphony orchestras, has taken her from coast to coast.

Miss Wasterlain's musical background is as impressive as her many accomplishments. An American of Spanish and Belgian descent, she received her later training through scholarships from three of the greatest violin masters of the times—Gregor Cherniavsky, Paul Hochanski and the immortal Cesar Thompson.

Anne Nash Sells Mystery Novel "Necessary End"

Anne Nash, Carmel Valley author of Said With Flowers, highly successful murder mystery published last April by the Crime Club, has just received word that her second "Who-Dun-It," at present entitled Necessary End, will be off the press some time in the spring.

In this new thriller and chiller Miss Nash's readers will renew their delightful acquaintance with Nell and Dodo, proprietresses of the flower shop, around whom so much creepy horror revolved in her earlier work.

FBI To Aid In Hunt For Hit-Run Car

The clothes of Benjamin Artellan, hit-run victim, have been sent to Washington, D. C. for examination by the F. B. I. It is the hope of local authorities that laboratory tests of paint stains on the garments may reveal the make of the car that sped away after striking Artellan down at 12:45 a.m. January 7 as he walked up the Carmel Hill highway with his fifteen-year-old son, Gerald.

Mrs. Artellan was waiting in their car at the top of "The Hill" when the tragedy occurred. The car had stalled and Artellan and the boy had pushed it to get it started, telling Mrs. Artellan to drive to the top of the grade and wait for them. As they walked along the right hand side of the road, they were aware of a car approaching from the rear Gerald told highway patrolman Sgt. Andrew Martin. Gerald moved over to the curb. His father was on his left and close beside him. The car struck the father hurling him fifty feet, killing him instantly. Gerald tried to get help at a house near the entrance road to the Jack's Peak tract, but the place was untenanted. Several cars passed before one stopped at his hailing and took him to the Toll Gate where the Monterey police were notified by telephone.

Carmel police and the highway patrol were immediately called, but fifteen minutes had elapsed and they were unable to pick up the trail of the car. Early reports that parts of the hit-run car were found at the scene and identification would be easy are erron-

Outland Explains Subsidies at Demo. Women's Meeting

Congressman George E. Outland of this district met with members of the Carmel Democratic Women's Club at the Girl Scout house on Sunday afternoon to report briefly on the work of Congress and to answer questions. A brief outline of three important problems now before the Congress and the country constituted the chief part of his talk.

First Dr. Outland discussed the bill which aimed to hold down the cost of living by means of food subsidies. This he considers to be not ideal, only a makeshift but the only means at present available to prevent spiraling costs of food. Subsidies have worked in keeping down costs, and are the lesser of evils. Moreover, the subsidies proposed would cost less than one per cent of the national budget, and there has been no alternative offered to their use. The law of supply and demand does not work in war time, with needs of the national government

THE FOURTH WAR LOAN IS LAUNCHED!

TUESDAY, the 18th of January, America's Fourth War Loan starts.

It is the largest of all war loans in terms of individual participation—in the amount you must dig down for.

And—it is, perhaps, the most important of all War Loans. For it comes at a time when the eyes of all the world are upon us: the eyes of our friends, the eyes of our enemies, the eyes of our own fighting men.

We have just entered the crucial year of the war, a year of destiny, a year that promises to decide how good or bad a world we'll have to live in all the rest of our lives. And the world is wondering how deeply we mean it when we promise our men we'll back their attack, and when we promise our Allies we'll stick with them not only through the winning of the war but through the winning of the peace as well.

The Fourth War Loan is the home front's first big test of this new and vital year. It will take unity and determination of will of all the people to make the Loan succeed.

The need for this and other War Loans should be clear to every American. This war is the costliest effort ever undertaken by any country. It costs 250 million dollars each day. This is just the cost of the war, in addition to the regular, inescapable cost of running a great and huge country. Taxes can't take care of all this outgo. Neither can government borrowing from insurance companies, savings banks, corporations, and other large investors. It is necessary to turn to the people, their weekly wages, their savings accounts, the money tucked away in pantry sugar bowls, in socks, under mattresses.

This is as it should be. In a democracy, war is the business of all the people. Some must fight, some must work and put up the money.

It's the only way to raise the money. It's also the right way to raise the money. It gives you a good place to invest the extra money you have today. It's a curb on inflation, on that dangerous bulk of pocket money that leads to black markets and disastrous spending. It's a mattress for tomorrow, a sort of individually planned Social Security that will bring in welcome money in the years ahead when income might not be the Mississippi flood it is today.

These last are not the reasons for the Loans. They are extra reasons, however, over and above the $1 interest you get on every $3 you invest. The fundamental reason for the Fourth War Loan is that your beloved America, at war and in danger, needs your help!

Every one who has a job or savings, should invest at least $100—if possible, $200, $300, or $500 extra. Some 5,000,000 Americans, volunteers, will be working to sell these Bonds. One of these volunteers will ask you to buy, where you work, at your home, or some other place. If by some chance, you're missed, find out where to buy and buy on your own.

The place where you work will have a quota. That's where you should make your major investment. That's where your personal quota really counts.

But . . .

The place you live also has a quota. Try to invest there, too. Other people will ask you. Salespeople, in retail stores, have volunteered to help and have an individual quota. If they ask you to buy, try to buy from them, too. Movie theaters, restaurants, schools, banks, postoffices, and many other places also will be selling Bonds.

The Fourth Loan is a test of us as a nation, as a people.

The eyes of our fighting men are upon us to see if we are backing them.

. . . The eyes of our Allies are upon us to see if we are with them.

. . . The eyes of our enemies are upon us to see if we are soft enough to fall for a non-victorious, here-today-gone-tomorrow peace . . .

Are we? The answer is in your pocket!

Let's all BACK THE ATTACK!

M. De Neale Morgan, Pioneer Artist, Opens One Man Show Here

father's mother, was the second of seven children born to Thomas and Christine Morgan. When she was two years old the family established its home in Oakland, and here she spent her childhood and young girlhood, her gift for art making itself known almost as soon as she could hold a pencil. She studied at the California School of Design on Pine street from 1886 to 1890, and among her classmates were Kate Carew (Mrs. John Reed), Evelyn McCormick, Louise Carpenter of Carmel, Josephine Blanche of Monterey, her sister-in-law, Charlotte Morgan of Carmel, Mrs. Lillian Bollinger Hardy of Carmel and the late Xavier Martinez. By a happy coincidence, six of these former classmates will be on hand as cohostesses for Miss Morgan's reception at the Carmel Art Gallery on Sunday, January 16, between 4 and 6 p.m., to which all of the public is cordially invited. In the receiving line to represent the late Xavier Martinez will be Mrs. Elsie Martinez and their daughter, Miss Micaela Martinez.

When the School of Design moved to Nob Hill and became the Mark Hopkins Institute of Art, M. De Neale Morgan spent another year there in study, and in the following year, 1896, she opened her own studio in Oakland.

Her first exhibit was held at the Hahn Gallery in Oakland in 1907, and William Keith, one of her earliest and most inspiring teachers, carried away with him a Pacific Grove landscape of little red-topped houses and eucalyptus trees. When the Del Monte Gallery was opened to provide an outlet for the artists following the San Francisco earthquake and fire, a painting of M. De Neale Morgan's was the first one sold. Since these early exhibits, she has held one-man shows throughout the country—in San Francisco, Oakland, Berkeley, Los Angeles, Palo Alto, Sacramento, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington, Baltimore, Dayton and Cincinnati, and her works have found their way into permanent gallery collections and private homes both here and abroad.

Miss Morgan came first to Carmel in 1903 with fellow members of the Pacific Coast Women's Press association, whose president was then Robert Sexton's mother, Mrs. Ella M. Sexton. They stayed for a month at Pine Inn and practically all in the group bought property and later returned. Miss Morgan came back in the following year and took a cottage at the edge of the woods, on Monte Verde. Ocean Avenue was then, she says, a permanent wave, and San Antonio a rabbit trail. Chris Jorgensen's studio was later to grow into La Playa, and Carmel Point was a solid mass of poppies in the spring.

In March, 1909 she came back again, this time to make Carmel and the studio originally belonging to Sidney J. Yard, on Lincoln street, her permanent home. And like her painting, and the bookbinding and picture framing which is done so deftly by her sister, Mrs. Jennie Klenke, who lives with her, the house has never ceased to grow in all these thirty-five years, but continues to sprout new rooms, intriguing little stairways, a crow's nest that affords a glimpse of sea over the rooftops—but whenever the walls of the studio itself push outward, the space is immediately filled with new and varied paintings, full of the flavor and color of the life about her which M. De Neale Morgan views so objectively and sincerely and untiringly. It was the English painter, Arthur Vachel who exclaimed once admiringly, "What a strong fist Miss Morgan has!"

Indeed, strength is one of the outstanding characteristics of her work. Facility she has, too, augmented by her studies with Emil Carlsen, Amadee Joullin and William Chase, and a deep, satisfying simplicity. She refuses to be typed, and she never repeats herself. Perhaps it is an inheritance from her pioneering grandparents that she is no "studio artist." Armed with canvas, paints and brushes, she sallies forth to catch the color, light and mood of her subject on the spot, painting with rapidity and sureness. In 1906 she trudged for miles about San Francisco, recording in crayon and pastel the havoc wrought by earthquake and fire. With unerring taste, she suits her medium to her subject, catching the weathered colors of the old Spanish homes and gardens she loves so well in tempera, frequently laying on her oils with broad, vigorous strokes of her palette knife when her sitter is an ancient, gnarled cypress etched against the swirling dunes.

When Miss Morgan, disclaiming relationship to schools and cults, called herself a "horse and buggy artist," H. L. Dungan, art critic of the Oakland Tribune, pointed out enthusiastically that she kept right on going places nothwithstanding, and that her work included everything "from pumpkins to pounding sea, and some things as delicate as young love."

The visitor to the George F. Beardsley Memorial room will find a rich repast: the dunes and sea and trees of the scene which lies so close to M. De Neale Morgan's heart, the wharves of Monterey, an ancient house in Santa Cruz, jutting balconies of old Spanish adobes, quaint Gilbert street and a tapestried hillside of Oakland, glimpses into backyards and over rooftops of San Francisco, Mt. Jacinto towering over the desert, occasionally a still life or a portrait, the blue delphiniums of the Orrick gardens in Pebble Beach, a carpet of wild flowers in the spring—an exhibit of vitality and distinction.

Added to all this activity of brush and canvas, Miss Morgan has found time throughout the years for a multitude of friends and visiting artists who have left her unique records of their call at the Lincoln street studio in her ten voluminous guest books. In 1914, one finds scrawled beneath the signature of Emma Storey Bellows, "same, only George." When Lotta Crabtree came to see M. De Neale Morgan in 1915, she left not only a signature but a little framed sketch she herself made on the 17-Mile Drive.

In these busy days, Miss Morgan spends each Thursday afternoon at Fort Ord hospital, where to date she has made no less than four hundred silhouettes for the men in service.

Perhaps no more cherished accolade has been given her than contained in two inscriptions on the flyleaf of Brother Cornelius' biography, Keith, Old Master of California, published in 1942. Here the author has written; "To Miss De Neale Morgan, master painter of the strange form, color and texture, the weather beaten toughness, the ancient fantastic weirdness, in a word, of the truth of our beloved Monterey cypresses—whose early and never-forgotten inspiration was Keith."

And below, in the handwriting of Margaret O'Callaghan, is added, "To M. De Neale Morgan, to tell her that of all Keith's pupils she has attained the highest place as an artist. As the interpreter of Carmel I salute her."

Attendance Up at Adult School; Big Signup for Forum

Registration for the Carmel Forum, which will hold its first meeting on Tuesday evening, January 25, at Sunset school, indicates that there will be an excellent attendance at the series. The first speaker, Dr. Hubert Phillips, professor of history at Fresno State College, has appeared on previous Carmel Forums. A recognized authority on international problems, Dr. Phillips will discuss Soviet Russia and its relation to the rest of the world, particularly the United States.

The second term of the Adult School has seen an increase in all the classes. Four groups in Spanish are meeting on Monday and Wednesday evenings. Mrs. Jordan's Beginning Spanish Class is now meeting twice a week, as is also Mrs. Miller's Intermediate Class. Aliens interested in taking the citizenship examinations, given next July, should enroll in the Americanization class, which meets on Monday evenings, as soon as possible. Members of the previous class were all successful in passing the December examination, and are now proud American citizens.

for prosecuting the war competing against civilian needs. Subsidies are not new in this country, as all tariffs on imports are really subsidies.

The rising demand of non-partisan groups in the country for passage of a bill providing subsidies is beginning to have its effect, and Dr. Outland believes that such a bill will be passed. Such groups are the League of Women Voters, the American Association of University Women, and consumer organizations, who have studied the problems involved and are not influenced by political considerations. Local organizations throughout the country have written their representatives in Congress, while the national boards have urged the senate and House chairmen of committees to enact legislation to check rising costs.

A second important issue considered is the right of men and women in the services to vote in the national election. The only argument offered against the bill for this is the question of states' rights, and that is really a pretext, he said. The real question is, should the men who are fighting for the nation be allowed the basic American privilege of voting in national elections. The Greene-Lucas bill was excellent and simple, but in the Senate the measure was "amended to death." Chairman Worley offered a bill that goes a step farther but really does not achieve anything. However, Dr. Outland believes that an acceptable and workable bill will be introduced and will pass.

A third vital question is what happens to those coming out of the service now, while war is still going on; there are now 10,000 a month of these, some of whom are mustered out upon return to our shores, perhaps without funds for return to their homes. They are already constituting an unemployment problem in some communities. They are the slightly wounded recently discharged from hospitals, and those developing emotional unbalance making them unfit for further service. It is not mustering-out pay that is the critical issue, but rehabilitation that will enable them to return to their homes and to an economic place in their community. Dr. Outland believes they should be given training of from one to three years, as may be necessary, in an approved institution, with minimum maintenance throughout that period.

The speaker discussed briefly several other bills of somewhat less importance, and mentioned interesting personalities in Washington, paying tribute to his colleagues, Congressmen Voorhis and Will Rogers, and to Vice-President Wallace and Supreme Court Justice Douglas. —L. L. T.

eous, Sgt. Martin said. A metal hood strip found near the body has been identified as belonging to a certain make and model of car but there is slight evidence it came from the hit-run car. Nothing can be done through tracing tire marks as the driver did not put on his brakes either before or after striking Artellan. Several citizens have offered leads, according to Martin. "The public, aroused over this brutal case, have been very cooperative," he said.

Artellan, well known and respected here where he was in much demand as a gardener, was 47 years old at the time of his death. He is survived by his wife, Louise, four sons: Martin, a corporal in the Marine Corps home on leave from duty in the South Pacific, Gerald, 15, Paul, 12 and Benjy, 9; by his brothers: James and Manuel; sisters: Mrs. Anthony Barbie, Mrs. Frank Silva, Mrs. Allen Bergquist, Mrs. Robert Wolter, Mrs. Walter Smith, Mrs. Lollie Silva and Mrs. Mary Souza; and an aunt, Mrs. Manuel Silva. All are residents of this region.

Requiem mass was celebrated at the Carmel Mission Monday.

Humphrey Todd

The death of Humphrey Todd, 52, member of a family well-known on the Peninsula through two generations, occurred on the afternoon of Monday, January 10, in a local hospital following several months' illness.

A native of Argentina, Mr. Todd came here with his family in 1913 and for several years was associated with his mother, Mrs. Jane Charlton Todd, in the management of a ranch in Corral de Tierra. Following his service in World War I, he made his home in Monterey on Grove street in Peter's Gate.

He is survived by his mother, a sister, Miss Juanita Todd, now in the drafting department of Consolidated Aircraft in San Diego, three brothers: Ralph and Frederick of Monterey and Howard Todd of San Francisco and a nephew, John Todd of Carmel, who has just completed basic training in the U. S. Navy.

WAC FILM AT STATE

The widely discussed film "Women at War" will be shown at the State theatre January 16 through 18. This 15 minute technicolor short is a story of a WAC from her entrance into the service as an embryo militarist up to the point of her eventual assignment. It is an exceptionally honest picture of basic training at Fort Des Moines, dotted with a touch of heart ache, and generously sprinkled with funny incidents in the life of a trainee.

Mrs. Hewittson Gets Letter From War Prisoner Son

A letter written in his own hand has come from Master Sergeant Alex N. Jones of the U. S. Marine Corps, to his mother, Mrs. C. W. Hewittson of Carmel, bringing word that he is well and interned in Camp 364, Osaki, Japan. This is the first direct communication Mrs. Hewittson has had from her son since word came from the Navy department reporting him as missing after the fall of Corregidor, followed by the announcement almost two years ago that he was alive and a prisoner of the Japanese. M/Sgt. Jones, who went overseas with the Marines at the outbreak of the war, is the brother of Sara Light, wife of Major Rex Light, now stationed at Southern Pines, North Carolina. Red Cross

By HELEN A. FIELD

The annual meeting of Carmel Chapter of the American Red Cross will be held in the Church of the Wayfarer on Wednesday, January 26th at three o'clock. Everyone who is a member of Red Cross or who has contributed a dollar or more to it will be welcome at the meeting. It is hoped that many will be there to keep in touch with the activities engaded in by local members.

The Gray Ladies find that many of the boys at the Station Hospital at Fort Ord can play a piano but that there is little sheet music available for them to use. Such popular songs as Sunday, Monday and Always, White Cliffs of Dover, You'll Never Know, Dear Mom, Stormy Weather are among their favorites though the music for any modern popular songs would be greatly appreciated by them. Will anyone who has sheet music of this type to give leave it at Carmel Red Cross headquarters.

The Gray Ladies also need buttons to use in their work at the Station Hospital. They ask especially for buttons the size of a fifty cent piece and need those the size of a nickel or a penny as well.

"Ships are essential to Victory, and we shall continue our job of building them at record pace in 1944." — E. G. GRACE, president, Bethlehem Steel Company

Bethlehem in '43 built 380 fighting and cargo ships.

Value of the year's program equivalent to 1,000 Liberty ships.

"A SHIP A DAY," with a number to spare, was the record production delivered by Bethlehem in 1943 to the United States Navy, the British Navy and the U. S. Maritime Commission. This program was the greatest in magnitude and diversity ever accomplished by a private builder in the world's history. It marked the fulfillment of a promise made by Bethlehem a year ago to build in 1943 an average of "a ship a day" of major fighting and cargo craft.

The list of ships includes aircraft carriers, cruisers, destroyers, virtually every type of fighting craft, as well as a large number of Liberty ships and other cargo vessels. In addition, Bethlehem ship repair yards converted, repaired, and serviced over 7,000 vessels, a vital contribution toward keeping the Allied fleets in fighting trim.

Measuring the program by Liberty ships, a battleship is equal to forty Liberty ships; and the value of the year's work in Bethlehem's shipbuilding division was the equivalent of over 1,000 Liberty ships.

Part of National Program — Bethlehem is permitted to publish these facts as part of our country's total program. Led by the U. S. Navy and the U. S. Maritime Commission, America's shipbuilding in 1943 has been a national triumph of production.

We salute our fellow shipbuilders and their distinguished records.

We thank our thousands of suppliers whose efforts have been essential to our contribution.

We congratulate the men and women in the Bethlehem organization, in shipyards, steel plants, factories, mines, and in every division, all of whom have had a part in this effort.

Harder Task Ahead — The year's work in Bethlehem's shipyards, steel mills and other departments has been done by 300,000 men and women. More will be needed. Already a larger shipbuilding task has been assigned to us for 1944. We shall undertake that job with the knowledge that it must be done, at maximum pace, to hasten the day of Victory.

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL

By J. W. GETSINGER

Carmel-by-the-Sea is unique. From the time that Monterey pines began growing on its seaward slopes, all the way down to the sand dunes, with gnarled cypress in the sand and among the rocks yielding to the frequent sweeps of wind from the blue Pacific, Carmel has been different. When Father Junipero Serra selected it as the site of his home mission, chose it as the place in which to live out his days and be buried, it was a charming spot. It has remained so these many years until history has yielded the perspective to propose his canonization.

Carmel has stimulated such diverse characters as George Sterling, Harry Leon Wilson, Lincoln Steffens, Mary Austin, Robinson Jeffers, Fred Bechdolt, Sam Blythe, and Jimmie Hopper. Painters, sculptors, and wood carvers have immortalized its beauty in a thousand ways. David Starr Jordan chose it as the place for the "Little Faculty Row" that Stanford professors might come here to relax.

During all the years that Herbert Heron has been producing Shakespearean plays in the Forest Theatre, a natural amphitheater in a pine forest, and the more recent times when the Bach Festival has been held in the stately Gothic setting of the Sunset School auditorium, with its final number, the B Minor Mass, in the Mission San Carlos de Borromeo, Carmel has been devoted to cultural things.

So, when Carmel decided, four years ago, to have its own high school, and formed the Carmel Unified School District to effect that purpose, it might have been expected to plan a high school plant in keeping with its traditions.

Otto W. Bardarson had been principal of Sunset (elementary) School for some 12 years when the unified district was formed. Devoted to the service of youth, forward looking in his educational philosophy, this big, blond, former college wrestling champion, whose forefathers had helped to establish the first parliament in Iceland more than a thousand years ago, had been a leader in elementary education from the time he first came to Carmel. He was the natural choice to lead in the formation of the new high school, and was named district superintendent, and first principal of the new unit.

Otto Bardarson lived only long enough to see his building plans completed, the new school well organized and in operation. Barely 44 years old, he was struck down in December, 1942, by a heart attack, in the office of the school he had planned. So greatly was he loved by the community that an Otto Bardarson Scholarship Fund, for the assistance of students of the Carmel schools in obtaining a higher education, was established by voluntary contributions of his friends.

Bardarson was ably backed by school-board members and citizens. Especially active were the late Mrs. Doris Watson who stuck to her guns through all the hard work, pressure from interest groups, encouragements and criticisms, of elections, bond campaigns, selection of a site, and letting of contracts; and Miss Clara Kellogg who brought her background of teaching and her broad business and political experience into the good teamwork necessary to accomplish the project. Peter Mawdsley, accountant and chairman of the board at the time, dealt with the problem of tax rates, bond redemption, sale of bonds, and handling of finances.

And Hugh Comstock, Carmel designer and builder of distinctive modern homes was elected to the board partially to lend his influence and experience to the project. In his buildings Comstock has used a great deal of hand-hewn redwood, heavy redwood roof shakes, and an improved type of native adobe brick. He likes buildings that blend naturally into their surroundings, are cleanly functional, modern in their utility, and lend themselves to California outdoor living.

Comstock has developed the use of steel and concrete with the modern type of adobe brick, which utilizes the ancient ingredients of native adobe mud, straw, and water, baked in the sunshine, but adds a small percentage of emulsified asphalt to make them impervious to water. The modern type does not melt down, even when exposed to continuous rain.

For an architect the board looked far and wide, searching for a man who could interpret Carmel's ideas while making the plant modern in its utility, reasonable in cost, and highly functional educationally. The choice fell on Ernest J. Kump of Fresno, California, who later became associated with Charles H. Franklin and moved his main office to San Francisco. Kump had specialized in the design of public buildings. He proved to be ready to take suggestions, capable, imaginative, with a fine understanding of the conditions and problems involved.

Meantime a site had been selected. This was not an easy process; there was considerable pulling and hauling in various directions before the 22 acres facing California State Highway No. 1, at the intersection of Ocean Avenue, was finally decided upon and purchased for $31,000. A rolling hilltop, this site had a glorious view of the Carmel Valley, Carmel Bay, Point Lobos, and the wide, open Pacific. With a reasonable amount of grading and much skillful planning, space was found for the buildings, athletic fields, roads, walks, and lawns, to make this one of the most picturesque and beautiful school plants anywhere.

The community voted a bond issue of $165,000 for site and plant, fully expecting to secure a federal grant on a 40-60 basis. But the PWA grants were discontinued just at that time. A WPA grant was sought, but finally given up after much effort. The board decided to go ahead, build as much as it could with the money on hand. The administration building, library, homemaking unit, and two classroom units were completed with the necessary heating plant, roads, and the rough grading for the athletic fields. The new high school was organized and started off with just over 200 students in attendance.

There was no gymnasium, no shop, no cafeteria, only a "dust bowl" for athletics, no music room, and a shortage of classrooms. But the board had done well with the money it had, the part of a school that had been completed promised so well that the community came to the rescue with more money.

Tentatively the board inquired of citizens their attitude toward a bond issue of $75,000 for most needed units. At a public meeting citizens expressed the view that this would not be enough, that the school plant should be completed, and the necessary funds provided. The board estimated that $150,000 would build a gymnasium, a cafeteria (which would also serve as music room and assembly hall), a shop, and two classrooms.

But again events interfered and the prices of labor and material advanced so rapidly in 1941 that the classrooms had to be omitted from the final contract. They are now the first necessity on the postwar work pile.

The present plant, built under two contracts, one in 1939, the other in 1941, cost a total of $284,000. Its architectural and planning problems were unique, because of the sloping hill on which it was built, Carmel's unusual background, and the fact that there were no old buildings to be dealt with.

Architect Kump says: ". . . The final solutions . . . were in a great measure due to the excellent understanding of the school needs and community problems by the district superinten-

POETRY

ALWAYS THE SEA'S WILD CAVE . . .
(To A Stone from the Sea)

Brought from the reef-rimmed shore,
(Green tides have washed your face!)
And children's low-tide laughter . . . for
This cloistered garden place;
Set in the chimneyed rock—
Far from the sounding sea,
Distance—and love—close-lock
Your mortared symmetry.

Stone, when the Rock was young—
Forged in her anviled cave,
Rolled on the tide's green tongue,
Tunneled by thundering wave;
Dragged to the sea's dark lair,
Pumiced by broken shell,
Caught in the kelp's green hair,
Crusted by barnacle.

Grey—as the gull is grey,
Flecks of the spindrift spume,
White as the cloud-white spray
That bursts in your caverned room;
Spewed by an angry tide,
Some winter night of storm,
Sunned, where the dunes lay . . . wide
As sun-glint sands, and warm.

Stone . . . from the distant sea—
Born of the reef and swell,
Always, you bring to me
The sound of the sea's deep bell.
Always, the moon-white wave,
(The heart deprived of choice!)
Always, the sea's wild cave . . .
To one who loves her voice!

TOWARDS SPRING

It won't be long till almond buds
Will dip their tips in dawn
To set the winter boughs with stars
And snow them on the lawn.

Already from the lyric sky
The blue descends so near,
The waves of heaven wash the grass—
What can spring do but hear?

Carmel High School

dent and members of the school board . . . and also the unusual knowledge of materials, site conditions and planning experience, typical of Carmel, offered to the architects through Hugh Comstock, a member of the board."

This school building group was created to be flexible in accommodating schoolhousing problems, essential activities of the community, and the functions of a general cultural center. Easy circulation for varied uses, and normal expansion of the necessary facilities to meet a natural community growth were sought.

The buildings were placed on the hilly portion of the property, athletic and play fields on the more level southern portion. The master plan was developed to include the later addition of a large auditorium-theater facing the entrance to the school grounds. The administration unit is located near the entrance, accessible to the public on the one hand and to the students on the other with a minimum of cross circulation. Parking for these units was planned on the site.

The gymnasium was placed between the classrooms and the athletic fields with easy access also to the community at large for sports events. The cafeteria was designed to serve as a music room, assembly hall, and small theater as well. It has ample kitchen facilities on one side, an adequate stage on the other. The shop building provides for expansion to several times its present size.

Classroom expansion has been provided for north of the existing classrooms to accommodate up to 1200 pupils or more. The original buildings were planned for about 250 students. They include an administration unit, general classrooms, a homemaking and art suite, and a science and commercial section. There are also the necessary toilets, central steam heating plants, and storage space.

The buildings are constructed with concrete foundations and a wood frame laid out on the unit basis, with steel framing for the gymnasium, cafeteria, and shop. All units were planned on the basis of a 4-ft. module for uniformity in scale and economy in the use of structural materials.

The exterior finish is based upon the selection of local materials, as far as practicable, produced by hand on the site and characteristic of the area. In this instance these materials involve no compromise either with functional design or practical economy. The roofing of all structures consists of hand-split redwood shakes acquired from the redwood forests along the coast south of Carmel. The exterior masonry consists of handmade adobe bricks, stabilized with bitumuls. The roofs of the exterior corridors are covered with 6-oz. copper roofing.

All exterior posts and lintels are constructed of hand hewn redwood, also secured locally. The general exterior covering of the building has cement stucco over metal lath with an uneven texture. The windows are of steel-sash project-out type, with hand-hewn trim and sills. The use of these unusual materials produces a charming and interesting effect.

All standard rooms were planned with a 28-ft wide clear span. This width has proved highly satisfactory in contrast with the usual classroom width of from 21 to 24 feet.

The interiors are of plywood wainscoting, stained natural, with walls of white Monterey sand finish, and acoustical tile ceilings. The natural lighting is bilateral, comprising full-length windows on one side with 4-ft. high continuous transom windows on the corridor side and above the exterior corridors. The result is a very even illumination across the entire room. The full-length window walls are equipped with drapes with sliding track for light control, the density of the drapes having been determined by experiment to allow admission of light with a minimum of glare. Some rooms are equipped with lined drapes so they may be darkened for moving pictures.

The structural frame of the building is so constructed that all interior partitions are nonbearing and movable for possible future changes.

The furniture is bleached pecan in finish, all interior floors except the gymnasium and cafeteria are finished in battleship linoleum, the exterior corridor floors in asphalt.

The Carmel High School was planned to be a six-year junior-senior high school, but community growth and the delays in completing the new plant caused only five grades, the eighth through twelfth, to be established there in 1940. This division has proved so satisfactory to the administration that the plan has been continued. The elementary school likes having the seventh graders, finds them just the right age to finish up their preadolescent training. The high school finds the eighth graders mature enough to be part of its life and activities, the entire arrangement seems eminently pleasing.

This year 280 students are registered in the 5 grades, with 13 full-time teachers and 4 specialists who divide their time between the high school and the elementary school. The unified district permits the use of these specialists where they can best serve, and makes a well-articulated educational program possible.

Miller Guest Speaker

For the first All Saints' Women's Auxiliary meeting this year the Chairman, Mrs. Vera Peck Millis, secured as speaker Mr. Alec Miller, the distinguished British sculptor. Some eighty members and guests were present, and of these eleven were men. Local art interests were represented by Mr. Gorge Seideneck, Mr. Bruno Adriani, Miss Alison Stilwell and Miss Micaela Martinez. Examples of Mr. Miller's exquisite and sensitive sculpture were exhibited. Among them was a crucifix, a Christ in glory, a bust of St. Joan of Arc, loaned by Mr. R. Ellis Roberts, an unfinished Madonna and Christ Child and a copy of the lovely kneeling child before a crucifix, the original of which was destroyed by the bombing of Coventry Cathedral. Among his secular work was a charming carved bust of Mr. Laidlaw Williams' little daughter.

Mr. R. Ellis Roberts gave a brief meditation and introduced Mr. Miller, who spoke on Art, and especially sculpture, in the service of religion. He held his audience for half-an-hour, as he took them from the great caves of the Dordogne, through Egypt, Greece, Rome and Christian Europe to the art of today. Mrs. Hulsewe ransacked her garden to make the tables beautiful; and the kitchen committee, headed by Mrs. Quinn provided refreshments.

Powell. Music for the event was furnished by the Post band and the ceremonies, in charge of Colonel Owen D. Meredith, commandant of the Presidio of Monterey, were witnessed by the Presidio troops and a large gathering of civilians.

Non League Members Invited to Attend Foreign Policy Meet

The Foreign Policy Study Group of the League of Women Voters will meet Wednesday, January 19, at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. L. O. Kellogg at Scenic and 11th. Voters not yet members of the League are invited to join the members in a discussion of post war problems. Since 1924 the League has given attention to political and economic policies which affect our relations with other countries. At the end of this war, chances for a lasting peace will be enhanced if the voters have kept abreast of current thinking and planning, the members believe.

On Wednesday Mrs. Blanchard Steeves will review material from the National League on Relief and Reconstruction. The British, Canadian and United States' points of view on the Future of the International Airways will be discussed by Mrs. Ritter Holman and Miss Agnes Williston. Following these brief talks, Mrs. Howard Elton Clark, chairman, will encourage those present to express their views and ask questions.

High School News

Sports

In the first league games with Monterey, both Lightweights and Heavies lost to the tune of 35-11 and 36-30.

The Lightweights started with evenly matched teams. Then it happened! What, isn't clear, but the Carmel team seemed to come unglued. The Monterey boys scored repeatedly. In fact, they scored 35 points; but Carmel didn't give up, and were able to pick up 11 points of their own. Art Templeman was high point man, as usual, for the Padre Lightweights.

The Heavyweights looked a different outfit as they drew first blood in scoring in the first few seconds of the game. However, Monterey was out in front by half time. The Padres really began to fight in the third quarter. With Bob Kolf as high point man Carmel pulled into the lead. The fourth quarter was a battle to the finish, with Ron Rico bringing Monterey back into the lead. Although the Padres fought hard in the last few minutes of the game, they could not overcome the six point lead their opponents had over them.

"Victory Dance"

After Friday's basketball game a dance was held in the cafeteria from 10:00 p.m. to 12:00. Success of the colorful event goes to the following committees: Members of the committee in general charge were Andrea Del Monte, Bill Finger, Carla Lepori; Refreshments: Betsy Roeth, and decorations Carla Lepori, Bob Elias, Martin Irwin, and Andrea Del Monte. The patrons kind enough to come were Mr. Getsinger, Mr. Marrs, and Mr. Rico. —Mary Jane Reel

Sunset School Notes

Last Tuesday a new boy came to our room. His name is Don Stalter. Thursday, we had another new boy named Bob Drew. Then today, Monday, we got still another new boy whose name is Jimmy Wurman.

It really doesn't matter much because we have had more girls in our room than boys. But now I am not so sure of that.

—Carol Forsberg, grade 5

I have a new book that I got for Christmas. The name of it is "The Pledge of Piang." It is very exciting and it's about two American boys who go out into the jungle and meet Piang. They have many exciting adventures together. The part I liked the best was when the American boys save Piang from a wild water buffalo.

—John Gibbs, grade 6

My brother and I went to the river Saturday morning. We made a big fire for the fishermen. One man said, "My hands were so cold that I felt my hand moving and looked down and there was a hook stuck in it." The men liked the fire very much.

—Frank Maher, grade 6

I went fishing Sunday. I saw some men fishing when I came to the river, so I went down-stream. By a big rock, I was waiting. Then all of a sudden I had a fish on my line! I pulled and pulled and finally I brought him in. I was very happy. It was a big steelhead. —Luis Wolter, grade 5

A Sad Case

Once there was a little boy
Who always wanted another toy.
He cried and howled as loud as he could
But that did not do him any good.

One night when he was in bed
To his little self he said,
"If I don't get another toy
I'll never be a good little boy
I'll run away
And there I'll stay
And never come back again."

So next day he ran away,
But his name I can not say.

William Dickinson

By Hester Hall Schoeninger

Announcement of the death of Seaman William Colbert Dickinson in a wire from the Navy Department received last Friday, January 7, by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Dickinson, brings sorrow not alone to his family but to his many friends in Carmel.

Bill Dickinson, as he was well and affectionately known, died, according to the telegram, "Following action in performance of his duty in the service of the American Merchant Marine."

He was born in Evanston, Ill., in 1913 and at the age of ten came with his parents to make his home in Carmel, attending Sunset school and Monterey high school before studying at Reed College and graduating from the University of California. In 1926 he went abroad with his family and became a student at a French progressive school, the Ecole des Roches. Following his graduation from college, he returned to Europe, taking a course in economics at Manchester, England, together with special study of the cooperative movement. In Sweden, Holland and France he made close personal observations of the cooperatives in action.

Upon his return to the United States, Bill Dickinson was affiliated first with the California State Relief Administration and then under the Federal Department of Agriculture in the Surplus Commodity corporation he made surveys of food resources in the West Coast states. It was while engaged in this latter work that he obtained a leave of absence to enlist in the United States Merchant Marine in March, 1942. Unwilling to take the life of any other human being, he was ready to risk his own in the carrying of supplies over far-flung ocean routes. In the performance of his duty, he made trips to Pearl Harbor and to the Solomon Islands, to Chile and to North Africa. Following a week's visit home in the latter part of June, 1943, he spent a short time on the Great Lakes; then left Hoboken for his last trip.

A cultured idealist, deeply imbued with a love of fine literature and music, an accomplished cellist and member of the Carmel orchestra, Bill Dickinson was also a zealous worker toward the betterment of living conditions for the common man, a firm believer in the cooperative movement, and after joining the Merchant Marine, he became a member of the C.I.O., an affiliation of which he was extremely proud.

The entire community shares a deep sense of loss with the family of Bill Dickinson: his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Dickinson of Carmel Point, his two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth White of Los Angeles and Miss Edith Dickinson, now serving as a laboratory technician at the University of California and his brother, Corporal Henry Dickinson, U. S. Army.

Costs Only 2 Dozen Doughnuts to Share Soldiers' Sat. Night

Carmel's USO is living up to Carmel's reputation for giving everything it touches a charm and color of its own. And the USO's Barndoor Canteen is living up to what a Saturday evening ought to be: good fun, good food, good fellowship.

Tex Cooke and her famous costume; Hazel Dale, in a fetching "deep-in-the-heart-of" hat, with a few mascara freckles on her pert nose; Helen McKinstry dashing cheerfully and busily about in her colorful leather outfit; the long table with its checked cloth and candles; the Angel's Roost (reserved for you, if you will come with two dozen doughnuts); cushions on the floor for the audience: these knit a colorful background that has become a familiar part of the soldiers' Saturday nights.

There is apparently a wealth of talent in uniform, and the USO has no trouble drawing on it. Last Saturday night Gordon Ayres, with Norman Rouner's piano assistance, delivered two monologues with dramatic finish; Bayne Wilson, with his guitar, provided a tale of his exploits with Biblical characters; Peter Wolf (middle name unknown but not The) did a dead-pan strip-tease (down to his uniform) that left no other dead-pan in the house. With Gladys Young's famous "Kiss Me Again," Edward Di Fiore's excellent work on the accordion, and group singing to cartoon-illustrated slides, it was a lively and entertaining program.

For dessert there was the dancing of Lt. and Mrs. Hernandez (formerly of Manila, but now of the 4th Army). Very charmingly the Lieutenant told of the background of the Rhumba, of its origin in the rhythm of a waterfall. Very gracefully he and Carmelita demonstrated it and other Latin dances. Then the show broke up in a grand Conga chain that drew in everyone present and left them all glowing. —C. B.
